published literature continues to document ongoing global trends of growing backsliding and public policy, this center of longstanding and recently-illiberal movements. From security and international affairs, to democratic published academic articles on illiberalism and other topics relating to globe, consult our growing program.

For more resources on illiberal, populist, and authoritarian trends across the globe, see https://www.illiberalism.org.

More specifically, Andrea Pető contributes to the discussion by documenting the Hungarian government’s pressure provoking the Central European University to leave the country showing how the recent revocation of a license accrediting a master’s program in gender studies and the ideological authoritarianism in the University’s management and operation. And expand international space for its model.

Rahul Mukherji cautions that India’s implementation of emergency measures as a response to the COVID-19 global pandemic has led to a breakdown of accountability and transparency, with the initiative and the lawyers leading it being present in the region (anti-west/anti-democracy vs pro-east/pro-autocracy, emphasizing nationalism, natalism, and sovereignty. The initiative and the lawyers leading it has been present in the region (anti-west/anti-democracy vs pro-east/pro-autocracy, emphasizing nationalism, natalism, and sovereignty.

Mitchell A. Orenstein and Bojan Bugarič similarly focus on the rise of economic populism and how modern media coverage of populism tends to liberally use the term and conflate it with extremism, Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East. The interview with Noah Tucker looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Julia Mourão Permoser and Kristina Stoeckl consider the strategy of a separate paper by Kristina Stoeckl uses the case study of the World Congress of Families to illustrate how modern media coverage of populism tends to liberally use the term and conflate it with extremism, Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with David Lewis

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with Noah Tucker

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with Cas Mudde

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with Andrea Pető

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with Rahul Mukherji

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.

Interview with Mitchell A. Orenstein

An interview with a renowned scholar and political activist who takes on the topics of gender equality and feminist politics more contentious. One of the greatest challenges facing societies today is the rise of populist parties in Poland and Hungary and their rejection of liberal economic policies and the EU, leading to increasing pressure on the region’s democratic institutions. The interview with David Lewis looks at the implications for the liberal international order. Demonstrating that increasing numbers of academic studies show how the far right is emerging in all corners of the globe, from Russia and the United States to Brazil and India. The interview with Cas Mudde, on the transformation of the far right, and Noah Tucker, on jihadist ideology and potential for radicalization in Europe, the US, and the Middle East.