illiberal movements around the world. Published literature continues to document ongoing global trends of growing illiberalism. For more resources on illiberal, populist, and authoritarian trends across the globe, consult our growing internet archive.

A new research project led by Marlene Laruelle (GW), Yuval Weber (TAMU), and Edward Lemon (UGA): "Conceptualizing Hierarchy and Resilience in Global Power Politics". "Conceptualizing Hierarchy and Resilience in Global Power Politics" studies the interlinkages among great power and non-great power regimes, which are increasingly shaping the contemporary world order. Through an advanced comparative research design, the project introduces a novel theoretical approach to understand how great powers develop international logics, hierarchical political orders with interactive effects of the great powers, and their dynamic interactions with non-great powers.

Announcing: "Conceptualizing Hierarchy and Resilience in Global Power Politics"

For more resources on illiberal populism and authoritarianism, consult the website illibstudies@gwu.edu. Your support is greatly appreciated.